This forum is more important than ever, when geopolitical interests re-escalate the old East-West conflict that was almost believed to be overcome." This year the festival will be opened on 9 April with the Polish drama IDA, which tells a moving Jewish family story with intense black-and-white images.

goEast festival director Gaby Babić summarized the highlights of the programme at the press conference today on Thursday: "Once again, we were able to collect the best Eastern Europe has to offer cinematically for the 14th edition of our festival. There are promising debuts in the Competition, continuously current masterpieces in the Symposium, hot topics that occupy all of Europe. At the same time our programme also reacts to the dramatic developments in Ukraine. We are concerned showing with concrete solidarity with the powers fighting for more democracy. The young filmmakers programme, one of goEast's emphases since the beginning, is being expanded into the new East-West Talent Lab – thanks to the support by the Kulturfonds Frankfurt RheinMain and the BHF-BANK Foundation."

At the press conference, Ingmar Jung, State Secretary at the Hessen State Ministry of Higher Education, Research and the Arts, emphasized: "The festival's annually rising attendance numbers demonstrate an increasing demand for cultural exchange between East and West. The festival is a wonderful example of how international understanding can function today. With our annual financial support, the State Government is very pleased to be able to contribute to the success of the festival and simultaneously to international understanding in Europe."

Rose-Lore Scholz, Head of Cultural Affairs of Wiesbaden, State Capital of Hessen, is also proud of the festival and the newly created forum for the festival's own talent promotion: "goEast brings international flair to Wiesbaden and establishes a highlight in the rich cultural life of the state capital. We look forward to the numerous guests – from West and East – during the festival week. Mutual understanding can only be deepened and friendships extended through people getting to know each other better. I am also glad that goEast was able to launch a new young filmmakers talent programme with the East-West Talent Lab. In addition to the programme offering of various workshop and networking opportunities, young filmmakers receive the possibility to present themselves with finished work and project ideas and receive new prizes.”
